AFTER THE SHOWER.

Across the grass,
The raindrops pass,
And pause to kiss the clover;
My garden green,
Is one vast sheen,
Of liquid pearls, all over.
On every rose
A jewel grows,
Of priceless light and luster;
The lily tall
Outshone them all,
The gems that she could muster.
She wreathed in lace,
And o'er her face
Of wren paleness hung it;
Her satin green,
Cool leaves are seen
Soft shimmering from among it.
The larkspur, too,
More brightly blue,
For her share of the plunder,
Has raised her head,
In garden bed,
The leveled grass from under.
What is this Metamorphosis?
The sky is gleaming redly
Where, rank on rank,
A massive bank
Of cloud was frowning deadly.
A spectral light
Through vapors white
Has trembled down from heaven
To light the day
On backward way—
For it is after seven.
From hill and dale,
From wood and vale,
The magic light has faded;
And in its place,
O'er Nature's face
Descends night's mantle shaded.
A gentle breeze
Has swayed the trees
To rest with fresh'n power,
But life and vim
Will follow in
The footsteps of the shower.

THE CHRONICLES

OF CAVE CREEK SETTLEMENT.

BY WILTON BURTON.

I. THE VILEST SINNER.

Years and years ago, when you and I were younger than we are now, dear reader.

A way back in Georgia or somewhere else.

The historian must not be too exact in stating times and places. As it is often necessary for him to exercise his imaginations, he must allow his readers the same privilege.

The center and soul of Cave Creek settlement (a strong accent on the "ment") was Cave Creek meeting-house, a barn-like frame structure, innocent of paint or any other guile, with four doors and twice as many unglazed windows, situated in a noble grove of oaks and hickories, on a level plateau of about one acre in extent.

The plateau was fringed all round with a scrubby growth of oak, haw, dog-wood and crab-apple, which not only afforded a cool retreat for horses and mules, but served for a frame for as pleasing a picture of a country church as one would care to see.

Down into the bosky depths of a deep worn path led invitingly to a perennial spring of cold, crystal water. Immediately behind the church in a small inclosure, deaf to pulpit warnings and past help of preacher's prayers, slept the just and the unjust, awaiting the sound of the last trumpet. Only a few of the graves gave token of the kindly remembrance of the living. A tomb of stones, rudely laid without line or mortar, a scraggy cedar, a wild rose, a few frail or undressed palings, a pen of marble shafts, obtrusively ambitious—each in its way, noted the degree of affectionate esteem in which the departed were held by their surviving relatives.

Under a wide-spreading oak stands the horse block. Ah, if it had only been a sentiment being, what tales of rustic courtship might it have unfolded! I can remember the time (or, perhaps I have heard my grandfather talk about it) when every gentleman made a study of the etiquette of the horse block, and only he who mastered its details could hope to win the favor of the fair. One rule was that, when a young gentleman led a young lady's horse to the block for her to mount, he had the right to escort her home. This would seem to have left the lady no freedom of choice, but I have been told that then, as now, a girl who possessed any tact could always contrive in some mysterious manner—perhaps by a glance across the church or a smile at the door—to make her wish sufficiently plain to the gallant, stout and enterprising youth of that day.

Once upon a time Bill Jones led pretty Fannie Brown's steed to the block and the couple set out for home together. But Fannie was coquettish, though she meant no harm by it, and managed in some way to drop some crumbs of encouragement in the road to Sam Spivey after her. Bill noted with jealous eye the approach of Sam, but as only one could ride beside a lady there seemed no danger—at least not till the bars, about half way home, were reached.

Bill dismounted and quickly let the bars down, Fannie's horse passed through and Sam quickly followed. The lady stopped to be rejoined by her escort, but Bill was so excited by these untoward incidents that he forgot to lead his own horse through before he put up the bars. Sam was quick to take advantage of the situation. A few sly taps delivered on the haunches of Fannie's horse made the animal so restive that Fannie could not restrain him, and, noisens volens, she sped away at a gallop beside Sam Spivey, leaving luckless Bill Jones letting down the bars again.

But, mind you, Bill Jones married Fannie Pate for all that. I know a great many of their grand children.

The occasion to which I invite the reader's attention at present was the annual July meeting in 18—. Why it was called the July meeting I could never tell, for it invariably took place in August. I have heard old people say it was supposed to begin always on the last Sunday in July, but being protracted not less than ten days, it necessarily encroached upon August; but I will not be responsible for any such loose statement; I only know that the July meeting was held in August.

The particular meeting to which this narrative refers is to this day remembered as a most refreshing season. Large crowds attended every day, and the grove all around the church was crowded with vehicles of every imaginable sort, while the surrounding fringe of forest was vocal with the whinny of horses and the bray of mules. There were two sermons a day, with a superabundant country dinner sandwiched between. After the morning service the congregation, with appetites whetted by the unworked exercise, assembled in the grove, opened their baskets and displayed to hungry eyes a profusion of the good things of life. There were chicken pies shaken into chaos by the jolting of the rough roads; buns, country-cured and boiled whole; puddings of "rights and lefts," like shoes, and stuffed with dried apples or peaches; chickens prepared in every language except that of Turkey; jugs of buttermilk, but nothing stronger, cooled in the little stream that flowed from the spring; sliced potato pie, custards, tarts, pickles, preserves, honey, jam jelly and last, but not least, watermelons of prodigious size and delicious flavor. Such was the dinner with which saint and sinner alike renewed themselves after the serious work of the morning.

The meeting had been going on about ten days and still there was no abatement of zeal on the part of the brethren and sisters. Brother Giles Howler was getting somewhat hoarse, but still he could make his voice heard above the raging chorus of shrill, treble and bumble bee bass, which set up when he began to invite mourners to the altar. If he should break down entirely, Brother Eleazar Myhand, a local exhorter, stood ready to take his place and speak his little stereotyped piece about the briny tear, ending with a fit of weeping that never failed to have its effect. And there was deacon Dilberry, slow of speech, but entirely trustworthy and reliable in an emergency.

One morning, about 9:30 o'clock, when the rumbling of approaching vehicles sounded like distant thunder, a little group of middle-aged men collected quickly under a wide-spreading tree in front of the church. At the same time five or six matronly women assembled near a side window of the building. Both the groups were quickly engaged in earnest conversation. Judging from external appearances, the men were discussing the always interesting, never exhausted subject of crops. All were chewing tobacco and expectorating vigorously; most of them were whittling chips, and one, Deacon Dilberry, seemed to be drawing in the sand the ground plan of a farm, ever and anon watering it with a plentifully with amber showers.

But appearances are often deceptive, as the first words overheard will show.

"Pear like Bose Hinkle air in about the hardest case I ever see. Brother Howler have 'bout give him up, which I don't blame him, but the wimmin yonder forment the side door, they're settin' on him, which they ain't no tellin' what they can't do when they heads is sot. Bless the wimmin!"

"Amen!" cried the chorus.

The women grouped about the side door (designed primarily for the use of such of their sex as had infants in their arms) were dipping snuff—a performance described by an Englishman as "rubbing snuff against their teeth with a blunted stick."

"I dunno whatever'll become of Bose Hinkle," said Sister Martin, dabbing in the hollow the communitistic snuff-box. "Look like he have hardened his heart an' stiffened his neck, as it were."

"The vilest sinner may return," quoted Sister Bigby.

"Well he air the viles sinner in this settlement," said Sister Myhand. "My old man have wept over him tell it 'pear like the tears would soften a heart o' rock. An' it's a pity too. Bose is a good boy, which he's kindest chile to his maw, an' he air sober as a jedge, an' I never has heard nothin' agin his character, which there never was a cleaverer or a honest boy of he thes had religion. What you all goin' to do? Seem like he'll hafter be let alone; Epham is jined to his idols."

"Oh, he'll be brought into the fold," said sister Digby confidently. "an' I wouldn't be surprised if he didn't turn out he's been converted so long his experience is plum rusty when you do hear it given in."

"Me an' sister Moon has got a plan to work on 'im today, an' ef it fails—"

Sister Martin could get no further. The results of a failure of the plan were too awful for utterance.

"Ef hit fails," said Sister Digby, as confidently as before, "they'll still be a way. Wharsoomever they's a will they's a way. Y'all try, an' ef you fall, I'll do my door, but mind you, I ain't agoin' to try my tries 'twell I'm bleeged to snatch the bran from the burnin'." Hile'll be a cross for her, but she must b'ar hit 'ef he can't be hope, which I call no names and ef they ain't no needcessity o' her adoin' anything, which she air nearan' dear to me, all the better."

Thus ended the conference.

The Rev. Giles Howler exerted all his powers that day. When he come down out of the high, old fashioned pulpit to call up mourners, he pulled off his coat and mounted a bench, so that he might both be seen and heard above the heads and voices of the singing throng. The din was fearful. Mourners flocked to the altar by the score.

"Come along now, while they ain't a bit of excitement," cried the preacher.

But Bose Hinkle sat unmoved. Brother Howler sat down exhausted.

The coveted opportunity had come for Brother Myhand. He arose and drew a pathetic picture of a mother shedding the briny tear over the worldliness of a wayward son.

Still Bose kept his seat.

Then Deacon Dilberry arose, and in his deliberate way made a talk.

"They are some that want to come but they thes can't come. They're legs has lost the power to tote 'em. I name no names, but my eye is on 'em," and he fixed his gaze on Bose Hinkle.

No visible effect on Bose. He did not quail before the reproving gaze of the whole congregation.

Suddenly two stout women, Sister Martin and Sister Moon, sallied up the aisle hand in hand. The significance of the move was known to all and a murmur went round, "They'll fetch him."

A young man seated beside Bose, panic-stricken at the approach of the formidable force, sprang out of the window and made good his escape. But Bose never flinched; his countenance exhibited not the slightest symptom of excitement. He was seized by both hands, which he yielded without resistance, but planting his feet firmly against the pew in front of him, kept his position against the combined strength of the two women who vain would have dragged him to the altar.

"Epham's joined to his idols," cried Sister Martin, releasing Bose's hand.

"Let him alone," cried Sister Moon.

The next morning as Bose Hinkle was riding undismayed to church he paused and cast his eyes over the fields of the young widow Wood to whom he had been paying unsuccessful court the past twelve months. It was indeed a fair prospect. The little widow had good land, and no mistake. She had a good house, too, but being young and having no children, she could not occupy it. She lived with her mother, Mrs. Digby.

Bose heaved a sigh as he turned away. The farm had never been an object in his courtship, but he was very far from making it an objection. The services were quieter than usual that day. Mrs. Digby was the cynosure of all eyes, for it was generally known that she had a plan for the conversion of the vilest sinner in the settlement, but what that plan was nobody could conjecture.

Mourners were invited to the altar. They came. Bose Hinkle sat motionless as a statue.

There was an interval of silence between two stanzas of a hymn. There was no organ to play an interlude. Deacon Dilberry generally threw in a few extra deep bass notes to make up for the deficiency, but this time he stopped with the rest. Everybody was on the tip-toe of expectation when up arose Mrs. Digby and in a stage-whisper, audible all over the church, thus addressed her daughter:

"Samanthy Wood, do your dooz."

In obedience to the parental command, the buxom little widow left her seat and made a bashful start down aisle toward Bose Hinkle. Her embarrassment was evident to everybody, and she afterwards confessed she had never been so "dashed" in her life. She minced along the aisle, one hand toying nervously with the folds of her dress, the other clutching convulsively at her collar, as though she were choked by conflicting emotions which had lodged in her throat. More than once she stopped a moment to hide her blushing face in her hands, and when half the distance to Bose had been accomplished she gave way to her emotions and sat down in a vacant seat. Then spoke up a motherly voice, full of sympathy, yet full of strength.

"Hit's a cross to her—oh, hit's a cruel cross to her, but we all got to bear our crosses."

Gathering new strength, the little widow Wood arose once more. Distrusting herself most of all, she now ran rather than walked the remaining distance, and placing one fat little hand in Rose's open palm, whispered, "come."

I shall not attempt to describe the electric thrill that shot through Bose's frame when he felt the touch of that hand; I doubt if Bose himself could describe it. Suffice it to say, he arose meek as a lamb and followed his fair fiancée to the mourner's seat.

The next day his name was placed on the church book, and the next week he and the little widow Wood were united in marriage. It was a joyful wedding, celebrating the reclamation of the vilest sinner in the settlement, and the only tear shed there was the inevitable briny one let fall by Brother Myhand, in an excess of gladness rather than in sorrow.

Oh, What a Cough.

Will you heed the warning? The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease, Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cents, to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup and Whooping Cough at once. Mothers do not be without it. A WAR VETERAN.

An Old Selma Darkey Who Is Proud Of His Record.

Maek Norris, an old and trusted colored carrier of the Times-Mail is a confederate veteran, brim full of reminiscences, and can tell as many stories of the war as any old soldier. He was the servant of Mr. Tom Norris, of this city, who was a member of Captain Kent's Company, the Selma Blues in the Eighth Alabama Regiment. He was at the battle of Williamsburg where Mr. Norris was killed, and he exposed himself to great danger in endeavoring to bring his body from the field. He was at the memorable retreat from Yorktown, was at Seven Pines, the seven days battle of Richmond and heard the bullets whistle on several other battle fields. As he himself expresses it, "Yes Lord, boss, heard 'em whistle a many a time, had to dig in a bomb proof once to cook in, yere sah, I see an old soldier. I is, an dere ain't many left around here what used to be belong to the Eightth. Capen G. Privett and Mr. Fitzgerald is about all I kin think of. Capen Privett kin tell you how I used to forage around for de mess." And Maek heaved a deep sigh and shook his head as he thought of the gallant Eightth Infantry and of its brave members who are dead and gone.

Maek is proud of his honorable war record, as every other old soldier ought to be.

Danger Signals at the West.

The wild scheme listened to by so many Western farmers, who are generally reasonable men, and the unwise threats they make, prove at least that they are dissatisfied profoundly with the present state of things, and that they are determined there shall be a change. They are suffering, and they clamor for relief. Will not they be exasperated rather than pacified by a change which shall make things worse than they are and force them to pay more for clothing, tin-ware, hardware, china, cutlery, etc., without putting an additional cent in their pockets to meet these heavier expenses? If Alliance resolutions are violent now, what will they be with the McKinley bill in working order? These are points well deserving the thoughtful consideration of Congressmen from Nebraska and other Western States. It will not do to say that the present excitement is a tempest in a teapot. It may turn out to be a cyclone in the Mississippi Valley.—Chicago Tribune, Rep.

Oates on Macune.

When Col. Oates was renominated for Congress in the Third Alabama District he made a speech vindicating his opposition to the Sub-Treasury Bill. In the course of his speech he alluded to a secret circular that had been distributed through his district to defeat him. This he attributed to Macune. He then paid his respects to Macune as follows:

"This circular has been circulated throughout the District and it makes grave charges against me and bears no signature. I know who the author is. It is Dr. C. W. Macune, the editor of the National Economist. I am not going to take up your time telling you who he is. He has no sympathy with our people. He came to the South from Iowa just before the close of the war. He went to Texas as hospital steward to a federal regiment and has been making his home there ever since. He wields a ready pen and is the editor of the National Economist. Since I wrote the letter on the Sub-Treasury plan he has pursued me in every issue of his paper. Some of his criticisms were just, but most of them were false. He said he would give much for my political scalp and would never stop until he drove me out of politics. Well, my labors in Congress are getting irksome, and I am kept so busy that I do not very often find time to go to church with my wife on Sunday. I had about made up my mind to retire, but when the firing begins I have never been known to retreat, it has not been my disposition, and when I was assailed from such a despicable source, I resolved to meet the attack like a man."

An Editor's Faith.

The editor of the Advocate, published at Greenville, Ala., expresses his faith in S. S.: "The good this preparation has accomplished is incalculable, and thousands of men and women that I have saved from an early grave to-day rise up and bless the originator, and those who placed it in their power to procure it. A number of our acquaintances have used this wonderful medicine to their great benefit, most of them to their perfect healing, and their testimony has been given to the public that others like them may take the healing balm. We know that Swift's Specific (S. S.) is no humbug, and can recommend it, and we do most heartily. The proprietors are genial, liberal and charitable, and have done probably as much or more good than any other firm in the south. Read reflect, and be relieved."—Greenville (Ala.) The "Original Package" Law.

A case is to be made up in Kansas and carried to the Supreme Court of the United States to test the constitutionality of the act of Congress which was passed to counteract the effect of the "original package" decision. It is to be hoped that the issue will be made broad enough to admit of a full reconsideration of the main question of the right of States to regulate traffic within their limits which is deemed to be injurious to the people. Presumably the recent act of Congress will be contested on the ground that that body has no power to confer upon a State any authority which it does not possess under the Constitution. This suit seems to be brought in the interest of liquor dealers, and no doubt the purpose is to get the act of Congress declared null and to restore the law to the condition in which the "original package" decision put it, but that would be a very unsatisfactory result and one not likely to be attained. The court plainly intimated that Congress might give its consent to the exercise of authority by the States to interfere with interstate commerce so far as to prevent the sale of liquors brought from other States. What is needed is a case which will open up anew the original question and lead to a full and thorough reconsideration of the whole subject.—New York Times.

A Winning Card.

The Alabama State Fair Association is now making an earnest effort to induce Hon. James G. Blaine to deliver an address there during the coming meeting. This is undoubtedly a worthy undertaking, aside from the other great features such as veterans' day, drummers day, Bicycle Tournament, Gun shooting, etc., which will have their features in connection with the finest racing ever seen in the South will induce people to travel thousands of miles to hear the statesman of the 19 century. The people of the South will accord Mr. Blaine a great welcome, and his appearance in Birmingham in connection with that of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston who will be there and Veterans' day, will make the Birmingham Fair the superior to all others ever held in this portion of the country.

WALTER NUNNELEE.

His True Condition—He Is Not Hopelessly Insane.

Age-Herald.

The Tuscaloosa Gazette of yesterday contains an interview with James H. Nunnelee in reference to his hospital for the insane at Tuscaloosa. Mr. Nunnelee is mistaken in one thing, however. The Age-Herald published no sensational dispatch from Anniston, but copied from another paper and gave due credit. In his interview Mr. Nunnelee says: "Yes, it is true that I have brought my brother Walter over to Dr. Bryce to be treated for nervousness, brought on by cigarettes, but I have been inexpressibly pained at the sensational and exaggerated account sent out from Anniston to the Montgomery Journal and the Age-Herald."

"There are some cases where the line ought to be drawn by all truly refined reporters, and I think that those like my brother's ought never to go in print. Where the Anniston sensationalist got the information that he was 'hopelessly insane' is a mystery to me, as there is no truth in the statement. He was brought to Dr. Bryce of his own free will and request, as a private patient, costing the state not a cent, and as such he was entitled to the silence of the press."

"Of course it is very gratifying to me to have had expressions of sympathy from his numerous friends in this and other places, but the wide publicity and sensationalism accompanying his sickness, can have done no good to the patient now or hereafter and only harrows the feelings of that fond mother and other loved ones at home beyond words to express."

"My brother is not 'hopelessly insane' and a few months' treatment by that great and good man, Dr. Bryce, will bring him around all right, but the effect of those publications will last as long as he lives and can never be effaced from memory's tablet, and like a ghost will always be rising in somebody's mind."

A Safe Remedy.

When a person is sick they wish more than aught else a restoration of health. They are willing to take even nauseous medicine in order to get well. When many, however, a first consideration is whether the medicine is perfectly safe. Will it or will it not leave any evil after-effects? Now, there is one remedy known to be certainly safe. It is a botanical discovery, and it is called Botanic Blood Balm, or B. B. B. It will not harm the most delicate constitution, nor will a discontinuance cause a craving for its further use. It is a sure antidote for poison in the blood. The blood becomes poisoned in various ways. Constipation, urinary difficulties and other causes of effete matter remaining in the system will cause blood impurity, or blood poison, as many call it. Symptoms of blood poison should not be neglected. B. B. B. should be taken at once. It will cure promptly, and is not bad to take, nor will it leave any evil after-effects.

J. D. Watkins, Blakely, Ga., writes: "Old sores covered, my entire person and itched intensely night and day. For several months I could not work at all. I commenced the use of Botanic Blood Balm and began to grow better the first week, and am now sound and well, free from sores and itching and at work again."

A Traitor to the Order.

The lard bill has passed the House and the hog is on top in Washington. This is the quadruped hog; the pipped porker has been on top ever since grandpa's hat was inaugurated. To pass this infamous imposition on the Southern farmers, the Republicans had the active aid of their Republican brother and Alliance ally, Dr. Macune, who holds a high office in the Alliance.

It ought to make the Alliance members in the cotton States mighty sick and more indignant to know that this high official, who is a Republican, should have used his official influence in securing the passage of a bill which robs the Southern farmer of millions of dollars annually for their cotton seed as to about take them out of the market.

And yet the Alliance is paying this traitor, Macune, to stay in Washington to watch the legislative proceedings and work for the passage of such measures as will be of benefit to the Southern farmers.

How well he has done this is shown in the passage of the Conger Lard bill.

The Alliance has been stabbed by one of its own household.—Tribune of Rome.

A BREEZY LETTER

From Hon. R. Q. Mills' District—Failure of the Scheme to Defeat His Renomination.

Editor National Democrat:

CAMERON, TEXAS, Aug. 9, 1890.

Sir: The County Democratic Convention in Milam county, Texas, met at this place on August 5th. Harry Tracy "the Sam Jones of Texas," as he is dubbed his friend, Dr. C. W. Macune, of the National Economist, has like The King of France, with forty thousand men, marched up the hill and then marched down again.

For about six weeks he was here canvassing this, his home county, in order to defeat Hon. R. Q. Mills, our Representative in Congress, for renomination and he has utterly and signally failed. He and his active political Alliance friends attempted to frighten Mr. Mills into the support of that base political fraud, the Sub-Treasury Bill—the most undemocratic of all measures now before the country, except Speaker Reed's Election Bill.

Mr. Mills preferred defeat to abandonment of the principles for which he had contended during life, and so informed Tracy, and his minions. They grew angry, ostensibly, and declared war against Mr. Mills, passed resolutions in the Alliance condemning Mr. Mills and declaring against him. These resolutions denouncing him were published in The National Economist and widely circulated. Harry Tracy, in a miserable conglomeration of nonsensical gush, styled a reply to Mr. Mills, also published in The Economist, denounced Mr. Mills as an arrant demagogue. Harry got a Congressional bee in his bonnet and felt around among his friends to find out his chances for Congress as Hon. Rogers's successor.

On August 2, the precinct primary was held at Rockdale, the home precinct of Harry, and Harry was up, so it is said, against Mr. Mills. There were 60 votes in this convention. Mr. Mills received 52 votes and "the Sam Jones of Texas" received 8 votes. The latter was a delegate to the county convention. There were in this convention 138 votes. Mr. Mills received 106, against 30. Harry was not up here. He did not have the courage to get up. Harry has been defeated in his home county on every proposition he has made. True Democracy prevails here. Tracy, Macune, et al omne genus, together with Sub-Treasury frauds and other anti-Democratic measures, all go down in old Milam, the home of Tracy and Macune.

These gentlemen may Republicanize North and South Carolina and Georgia but we know them too well here to be misled by their centralization scheme, and other machinations which have been devised to break the solid South and turn it over to the Republicans. We are Democrats and intend to remain so. If North and South Carolina and Georgia knew Messrs. Tracy and Macune as we know them here, the tried and trusted Democratic leaders in those States would still be honored by those people with their confidence and political preferment. Our leaders will still represent us in Congress despite Macune and Tracy and the sub-treasury bill. Hon. R. Q. Mills will still represent the Ninth District in Congress. "God bless him! We honor him for his stand on this miserable fraud. He stood by us and we will stand by him. Every county in his district has instructed for him. Bye bye Mac. Ta' ta Harry; au revoir. Be good little boys and stick your finger in the eyes of tar-healers and goober-grabblers, but don't bother Texas rangers any more. "You can't fool 'em."

Hurrah for Roger Q!

Respectfully,
E. L. ANTONY.

Neglecting a child troubled with worms may cause it to have epileptic fits. Horrible! Give it Dr. Bull's Worm Destroyers at once and save the child.

The Congressional Canvass.

The action of the conventions in Clarke and Marengo counties ensures the return of Hon. R. H. Clarke to Congress, from the 1st District. If there ever was a doubt of this, it has all been removed and the services of an able representative have been again secured. General Wheeler will be renominated as the Decatur News says; "by a Congressional convention in which every delegate, every alternate and every spectator, will be for the renomination and re-election of General Wheeler. It also says that "in Morgan county, every Democratic voter, their wives, their sons and their daughters are for him." This makes him pretty solid. In the 4th Mr. Turpin will be re-nominated. There is no contest in any district except the 6th, and if Judge Cobb is successful Alabama will present the spectacle of no other Southern States does of sending back an unbroken Democratic delegation.—Montgomery Advertiser.

For Congress

WILLIAM H. FORNEY,

Of Calhoun County.

The Democrats made large gains in Vermont at the election Sept 2nd and there was a large falling off of the Republican vote. It is the handwriting on the wall.

Mr. Holb, President of the National Farmers Congress at Council Bluffs, in his speech, upon opening the convention, was careful not to endorse the sub-treasury scheme or government control of the railroads.

Although it looked as if his election to the United States Senate depended upon his acceptance of the sub-treasury scheme, yet Gov. Gordon opposed it in a public speech. No public man of any consequence, who must deal honestly with the people, dares to endorse the bill.

Tallapoosa county with a population of 23,401 has had two representatives in the Legislature since 1880. Talladega, with a population of 23,890 has had two representatives for the same length of time. It may therefore be regarded as certain that Calhoun with 33,611 will have two representatives under the apportionment of 1890.

A robber, supposed to be Rube Burrows, stopped a Louisville & Nashville train between Mobile and Montgomery a few nights ago and robbed the express car, or rather he made the engineer and express messenger rob it for him while he amused himself firing off his pistols on the outside and frightening the conductor and passengers. This looks like there were some pretty big cowards on that train.

The State Normal school opened Tuesday with 132 enrolled pupils, and ten more were added Wednesday, the largest opening it has ever had. By Saturday evening the attendance will be 150. President Gibson has letters from twenty-five others who signify an intention to enter at an early day. Others, both here and abroad, who have not as yet communicated with the President, it is known, will enter in a few days. There will be fully two hundred in attendance by the middle of the month. The attendance from points outside of Jacksonville will be much larger this year than at any previous time.

Dr. Felton has accepted a nomination in the Seventh Georgia District to oppose Mr. Everett, the Alliance candidate for Congress. Dr. Felton is a farmer but he believes the sub-treasury bill and other heresies of the St. Louis platform destructive of popular liberty and the interests of Southern farmers. He will stump the district from now until the election, and the general feeling in Rome is that he will be elected. The convention was brought about by the fact that the Alliance determined in secret upon the nomination of Mr. Everett and will force the Democratic Convention to do its will. Dr. Felton says the Alliance is a secret political party and adds: "Free government and secret political organizations cannot live together. One or the other must die."

The National Farmers' Congress which recently closed its session at Council Bluffs, Iowa, adopted a Democratic platform throughout. The sub-treasury bill, government ownership of railroads and other centralizing and undemocratic measures were denounced. The platform demands liberal appropriations for river and harbor improvement; unlimited coinage of silver; the abolition of national banks; that United States Senators be elected by the people; that the patent law be amended so as to limit patent right to ten years; declares for an income tax and a reduction of tariff taxation and that no greater tariff be levied than is necessary for the wants of government economically administered.

The fight in the Seventh Georgia Congressional District is between the Alliance Democracy and those calling themselves the straight-out Jeffersonian Democracy. The result of the primary elections in the different counties of the District revealed the fact that the Alliance would control the District Convention called by the Democratic Executive Committee for the 10th of this month. Thereupon Congressman Clements, the present incumbent, refused to go before the Convention, it being understood that the Alliance had decided to nominate Mr. Everett, an Alliance man. Those Democrats of the District who were not Alliance men thereupon called another Convention and nominated Dr. Felton. So there is a split in the Democratic party in the Seventh District. The Montgomery Advertiser takes the ground that the Democrats of the District should support Everett, if he secures the nomination of the regular convention on the 10th, notwithstanding the secret methods employed by the Alliance to bring about his nomination and notwithstanding his endorsement of the sub-treasury bill.

In other words that Democrats should always support the regular nominees of their party conventions and never countenance independent movements. We agree with the Advertiser. The remedy of the dissenting Democrats in that District should be not independent movement, but a submission now and thorough organization to prevent the capture of their next convention by any secret order whatever. They have been caught napping and should make the best of the situation. The men who will support Everett are good Democrats, notwithstanding they have gone off on the sub-treasury craze. That cannot last. They will soon see the error of it. Meanwhile nothing can justify a split in the Democratic party in any Southern State.

Cotton seed oil has been entering more and more into the manufacture of lard. There has never been a question as to its healthfulness or superiority to hog grease for culinary uses. The more the public used it the better liked it became, and its employment in the manufacture of compound lard brought the price of cotton seed up from ten cents to twenty-five and thirty cents per bushel. But as cotton seed became popular, western hog lard became less and less in demand, and the western hog raiser made a demand for "protection" at the hands of Congress against the Southern cotton raiser. A Republican Congress, which is always ready to sacrifice any Southern interest to any Eastern or Western interest, listened to the complaint of Western hog raisers and proceeded to legislate against the employment of cotton seed oil in the manufacture of lard.

At this juncture it might have been supposed that Dr. C. W. Macune, editor of the National Economist, a paper largely patronized by Southern farmers, would have spoken out boldly in behalf of the Southern farmers; but he did not. On the contrary he joined the Western hog raisers in their war upon the cotton seed oil industry. And it was largely through his influence that the bill was passed in Congress.

Seeing that Dr. Macune is an Iowa carpet-bagger, who followed the Federal army into Texas at the close of the war, there is nothing strange in his attitude when it comes to a question of interest between the Southern and Western farmers. But it is strange that Southern farmers are willing to longer follow the lead of a man who has shown so conspicuously his hostility to their interests.

While he works for the substantial interests of the Western farmers by favoring legislation which cripples one of the most important industries of the Southern farmer, he endeavors to please the men who help to rob by holding up to them the transparent humbug known as the sub-treasury bill, which is utterly ignored in the West and which Macune knows has no earthly chance of ever becoming a law, and which, if it should become a law, would utterly ruin the men in whose interest it is advocated. Southern farmers ought to have more sense than to be caught by such chaff as this, especially when presented by men who are aiding and abetting Congress to break down important interests of the Southern farmers.

Felton and the Alliance.

Dr. Felton justifies his candidacy for Congress against Mr. Everett, who will be nominated on the 10th inst., on the ground that Alliance methods of nomination are undemocratic. In his speech at Rome he said:

"Some weeks ago I read in a newspaper about this Alliance. The sub-alliances in the Seventh Congressional district are now slinging their ballots to determine who shall represent the people of the Seventh Congressional district in the next Congress. Fellow citizens, I know nothing of it. You were out there on your farms. You who did not belong to the order, you knew nothing about it and now here was the so-called Democracy of the Seventh Congressional district shut in behind doors, bolts and bars, a little crowd slinging their ballots to determine who they should support in the next Congress. A few days or weeks thereafter they come out by force of numbers and they march to the primary ballot box and reveal perfectly in public what they had settled upon. They call that the National Democratic Party of this Union. Not satisfied with one nomination, they propose to have two nominations to determine the candidate to represent this district in the next Congress of the United States. My fellow countrymen, bear in mind that no Democrat places himself undilutely upon this platform. We owe our allegiance to the National Democratic platform and can never belong to a secret political organization."

The convention of Clarke county which selected delegates to the Democratic Congressional Convention at Mobile, instructed for Hon. R. E. Clarke for Congress. A resolution was also adopted requesting the Senator from the district and the member from that county to vote for Hon. James L. Pugh for United States Senator.—Montgomery Advertiser.

LETTER FROM PIEDMONT SPRINGS.

PIEDMONT SPRINGS, ALA., September 2, 1890.

This is the last letter I shall write from here. Today my month is up, but I stay over one day longer at the special invitation of Mr. Ledbetter, who so successfully manages the hotel. To stay another day is not a hard thing to do, for this is a mighty pleasant place to stay at and a very hard place to leave. Good company, capable management, fine mineral water and pure air render this altogether one of the most delightful resorts yet thrown open to the public in the South. The fact that it is the first elevated watering place north of Selma and more southerly points on the line of the E. T. V. & G. Railroad will make it very popular. One may leave Selma at 7 o'clock in the evening and be at the Springs by midnight. The E. T. V. & G. Railroad has their photographer here taking views and next season will advertise this as one of the chief resorts along its line. Since my last letter new mineral waters have been discovered on the crest of the mountain, 500 feet above the hotel. These can be easily carried down the mountain side to the hotel, as well as can be a huge freestone spring, which is some 150 feet above the hotel. This may form the water supply of a lake near the hotel at a future day.

When I came here one month ago it fatigued me to walk to the nearest spring, only about 200 yards from the hotel, on a gentle incline. Friday last I climbed rapidly up the face of the mountain, over rough boulders, five hundred feet to the summit, walked two miles along its crest, descended to the hotel and then walked to the spring for water and felt not the least fatigue therefrom. When I add that I have gained nine pounds in good solid weight, it must be taken for granted that this is a healthy resort. My case is not exceptional. Every one of the very pleasant party of people who have been here as long as I have report similar surprising results.

So far as the healthfulness of the place is concerned its reputation is already made. If the accommodations are enlarged next season and it remains under the same capable management as this season, no place in the South will be more popular. All it needs is to be known.

The public is to lose the composite description of one of the charming landscapes from any one of the points along the mountain, near the hotel, promised in my last, from the pen of a lady here and the pencil of the writer. The rain came and prevented the excursion for one day and then a headache the next and then the absence of the writer on business. Since that promise was printed I have seen some of her literary work and can safely say that the public loss has not been inconsiderable. That is to say not inconsiderable as regards her part of the work. As to my humble share in the literary undertaking I apprehend that the public has not suffered greatly.

I wish that I had my writing mood on me now that I might describe just one gorgeous sunset and one coldly splendid moonrise as seen from this point; but a most intolerable headache from a touch of hay fever which seized me directly I went down into the valley the other day prevents, and so the public is a loser again, presuming that my descriptive powers were equal to the task. Suffice it to say that Italian skies never presented a fairer sunset nor did I ever in any clime witness softer nothings under a more wondrously beautiful moon than can here be seen when she bursts over the mountain top full orb and flooding the world in chaste loveliness. I was standing with a lady some nights ago in front of the hotel, watching one of the bewitching ascensions of the moon over the mountains top, and I asked her why lovers so much preferred the moon to the sun. She said the moon was so much kinder than the sun. I have been wondering what she meant ever since who dwell in the land of romance and have yet the bloom of youth upon their cheeks can tell. How should I know, being an old married man, immersed in books and newspapers, politics and business, not to speak of the more serious questions concerning the life which is to come?

A party of ladies and gentlemen, under escort of Mr. Chas. Adamson, came down from Cedarstone some days ago and spent a day and night. The party was composed of Mrs. J. K. Barton, Miss Barton, Miss Clara Barton, Miss Cassidy, Miss Hurt, Mr. S. E. Evans and Mr. Chas. Adamson. Since my last letter the following visitors have been to the Springs: Miss Jessie Gray Clark, J. C. Ware, L. A. Bell, W. C. Culverhouse, Selma; Jno. H. Lake, Camden, N. J.; Miss J. V. Winston, Gainesville, Ala.; J. G. Horn, Meridian, Miss; Miss Mamie Crow, Miss Willie Woodward, Miss Ida Kirk, S. R. Wilkerson, J. T. Doster, Miss Jessie Forney, Miss Sallie Hoke, J. J. Arnold, C. N. Arnold, Chester F. Matison, Arthur Skelton, Jacksonville; C. A. MacArthur, J. L. Tamm, S. McPherson, Piedmont; G. H. Sterling, South Dakota; G. B. Johnson and J. S. Bridges, Calera.

In a few days a party of fifteen or twenty people from Massachusetts are expected.

With the accession of new guests from more northerly points these here will begin to return to their homes further South. In a few days our pleasant party of Selma people will be much broken up. Mr. Hooper and family left Monday. Others leave in a few days. All have promised to meet again next season at Piedmont Springs, and if fortune is kind and heaven spares me and my good wife until another season, we shall rejoin them and renew an acquaintance which has been full of pleasure to both of us. To Mr. Ledbetter and every attaché of the house I am under obligation for numberless courtesies and kindnesses.

Harmony in South Carolina.

Good sense has prevailed in South Carolina and there will be no open split in the Democratic party there. Senator Butler arrived in Columbia on Tuesday and advised the Democrats then assembled for conference that if the Tillman men had a majority in the State convention the opponents of Tillman should acquiesce in the opinion of all the party leaders a bolt ought not to be thought of. The State convention of anti-Tillmanites met at Columbia on Tuesday night with ex-Chancellor W. D. Johnson, of Marion, in the chair. About 400 members were present. After a vigorous discussion of an hour the convention went into secret session. The conference remained in session all night and on Wednesday morning it was announced that the course followed by Senator Butler would be followed.—Washington National Democrat.

Two of Private Allen's War Stories.

Congressman Allen of Mississippi never tires of telling funny tales about the war. Here are two:

A Confederate soldier in a certain regiment had become noted for running away from every fight. On one occasion his Captain found him in line as an unexpected attack opened. Standing behind him, the Captain drew his pistol and said:

"Now, John, up to this time you have run from every fight. You have disgraced yourself on all occasions. Now if you stir from the line this time I intend to shoot you dead. I shall stand here, right behind you, and if you start to run I shall certainly kill you."

John heard the Captain through, and drawing himself up to an unusual height, replied:

"Waal, Captain, you may shoot me if you like, but I'll never give any privileged, low-down Yankee the privilege of doing it."

At Murfreesboro a Confederate soldier was rushing to the rear with all the speed he could command. An officer hailed him and sneeringly inquired why he was running so fast away from the Yankees. The soldier, without stopping, yelled back:

"Because I can't fly."—Galveston News.

What Kind of Advertising Pays?

So many houses are now claiming in large type, each to sell goods from 20 to 50 per cent. cheaper than any other house, that we believe sensible people disgusted with these improbable yarns, are paying but little attention to display ads. For that reason we have taken but little space in the papers but have adopted the plan of advertising our own counters by offering every week some new things at less than real value, and by keeping every department fresh all the time with novelties. It seems to work well. Our trade is growing very fast.

This week we shall offer many styles of WASH DRESS GOODS, including Thin Black Goods, White Goods, Printed Mulls, Batiste, Lawns, Challus and Scotch and French Ginghams. They are all marked in plain figures. Drop in and look at them.

Drs. Crook & Ayers have moved their office from the north side of Public Square, Main Street, to south side Public Square, Main Street, first door up stairs west side Main Street, Porter & Martin block.

Dr. P. H. Brothers, president of the County Medical Society, was in Jacksonville Thursday. He says the public road between Jacksonville and his residence in the southwest part of the county is in poor condition. We will never have good roads in Calhoun until the county road law is executed as it passed the Legislature. Patchwork is work thrown away.

Things are looking exceedingly bright for Jacksonville now and there has been increased confidence this week, which has shown itself in real estate transactions. Among other things which tended to this end is further information as to the steel plant and the news of another big plant being secured for the town which will be owned by a Boston company.

Mr. J. Flournoy Crook will open a law office in the rooms formerly occupied by Drs. Crook & Ayers. Flournoy is a graduate of the State University and a particularly bright and popular young man. We predict a brilliant future for him. Since his graduation he has been hesitating between Jacksonville and some other larger point. Being now convinced that Jacksonville will be a large city in a few years, he has decided to cast his destiny here.

Francis Avenue has been completed and turned over to the city. It has been paved with the self-cementing white stone found in the mountains here and will last a century. It is milk white and as smooth as can be. The pavement will be carried on to Park Avenue which is now being graded and the whole will form a fine drive way. Gen. Burke says that there are only two really beautiful drive ways in Alabama, one being the shell road at Mobile and the other Francis Avenue in Jacksonville.

Maj. H. F. Vernon and daughter Mrs. L. D. Miller left last Tuesday to attend a reunion of the descendants of Alexander Vernon, at old Nazareth church. The last named a distinguished soldier in the revolutionary war was buried in the cemetery of the above named church. His descendants are numbered by scores among the influential and wealthy citizens of Spartanburg county and many others scattered from South Carolina to Mexico—he having reared eleven children, all of whom had large families.

The exercises of the reunion today (Saturday) will consist of music, social chat, a basket picnic, and historical speeches by Col. T. J. Moore, Hon. J. B. Cleveland, Dr. J. O. B. Landrum, Capt. P. E. Chapman and Maj. Jno. Earle Bonar, all of whom are great great grandsons of Alexander Vernon and ex-members of the South Carolina Legislature; the committee on invitations, likewise descendants, is composed of Col. J. W. Montgomery, Capt. J. J. Vernon, Jr., Dr. J. C. Oeland and Maj. F. L. Anderson.

It will doubtless be one of the largest and most interesting family reunions ever held in the South, as it is expected that several hundred relatives will be assembled within the walls of the old church—all descendants of the Alexander Vernon or their wives and husbands.

Mr. H. F. Vernon and daughter will be accompanied to South Carolina by an elder brother, Jno. J. Vernon and part of his family, who will join them at Cass Station, Ga.

E. B. Forbes has just received a large shipment of Pianos and Organs at Anniston. He will sell them on easy payments and long time. Special inducements offered to cash buyers. Write and get his prices before you buy.

Col. Oates' Renomination.

One by one as regularly as the Congressional Conventions are held, the Democratic members are renominated for return. Messrs. Bankhead in the Sixth District, Herbert in the Second and Forney in the Seventh have already been successful, and Col. Oates in the Third is added to the list this morning, making four altogether.

The nomination of Col. Oates by acclamation at Union Springs yesterday is particularly gratifying to every loyal Democrat and to every admirer of courage, ability and devotion in public life. Always active, positive and vigorous in the discharge of his duty according to his convictions, he has recently had occasion to display his characteristics not only for the good of his party, but in the face of circumstances that redound to his credit in an unusual degree.

No Democrat in either branch of Congress has been more conspicuous for vigorous opposition to the dangerous doctrines enunciated in the new notorious St. Louis platform of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, and to the chimerical and audacious scheme known as the "Rub-Treasury plan." He was the first member of the House, from any State, to answer the questions propounded him on those much room issues, and his answer was like the man—conscientious, vigorous, straight from the shoulder. Since that time he has been singled out by Macune of the National Economist and sundry other demagogic misleaders of the people, out of the State as well as within it, for special attention. His political scalp they determined to have and they left no effort untried to get it. Macune himself spent several days in Third District, and a secret circular distorting Col. Oates' record was distributed among his constituents, which he boldly ascribes to Macune. But the Democracy of the Third District was proof against all such wiles, and though Col. Oates never put foot in it from the beginning of the agitation until the day before the convention, a majority of the delegates were instructed for him, and the opposition to him was so weak that it did not show its head. There was no effort even to break instructions, as was the case here in Col. Herbert's district.

A renomination by acclamation under such circumstances is a splendid showing of loyalty to true Democratic doctrine on the part of party in the Third District. It shows that faithless demagogues who would lead the people astray with an ignis fatuus of any kind can accomplish little harm in Alabama. The people will not desert the true faith to bow down before any false idol. And this action, too, is a weighty object lesson to all men who would be leaders, to emulate Col. Oates' example by promptly and boldly facing every issue, no matter how onerous, with a clear-out, conscientious expression of conviction. It is the best policy, as well as the manliest course. The political trimmer and demagogue may flourish for a time, but he is always short-winded and falls by the wayside before he reaches his goal.

The action of the conventions so far ensures the return of four of Alabama's present delegation. Not a one has been retired as yet. And this fact unquestionably strengthens the probability that their other four colleagues will also be returned. There is little doubt about the success of Messrs. Clarke in the First District, Turpin in the Fourth and Wheeler in the Eighth. There is some apprehension in the Fifth about Judge Cobb's renomination, but he himself is understood to be confident, and that signifies a great deal.

The prospect is that Alabama will present an unbroken front next November, and what a glorious tribute that will be to her intelligent conception of, and loyal devotion to, the eternal principles of Democracy! First in the roll call of States, she promises, unlike any other of her Southern sisters, to answer by presenting her shield of Democracy untarnished by the wave of demagogic agitation that has been sweeping over the country.—Montgomery Advertiser.

My wife had been so long afflicted with chills her health became very bad. Quinine did not agree with her and I concluded to give her Smith's Tonic Syrup, and to my astonishment two bottles made her perfectly well.—P. B. Lee, Bigbee Valley, Miss.

The Use of Quinine.

There is no questioning the fact quinine is a valuable medicine as a tonic, anti-periodic and anti-pyretic, and that its discovery has greatly helped the cause of medicine. Still in a majority of cases its use is not altogether satisfactory as it frequently deranges the system, producing headache, dizzy feelings, convulsions and sometimes even paralysis. It was the endeavor of eminent Dr. John Bull of Louisville, Ky., to invent a substitute for quinine, something that would have all the good qualities of quinine, and yet be entirely free from its evil tendencies. How admirably he succeeded is evidenced by the estimation in which his remedy, Smith's Tonic Syrup is held by the people; where it is best known everybody uses it in place of quinine and it never fails to give the very best of satisfaction. In case of chills and fever it is absolutely a safe and certain cure.

A Good Name is Certainly Better than Riches in the business world. That is why we never permit customers to leave our store dissatisfied with their purchases.

We aim to get the Good Will of the People, and our largely increasing business shows that we have been successful. Our goods, our prices, and our straight American methods of doing business make it an object for you to

TRADE WITH US.

It's a Unique position we occupy as Leaders. This is forcibly indicated by the scores who interview us daily on styles. As we are asked, our judgment must be valued. If we know as we don't it most natural we should pattern our stock accordingly? Certainly.

The Dealers who do so much talking about the amount of money they save to the purchasers of clothing are the very ones who who are making it more expensive. For instance you cannot get a whole page advertisement for nothing. Neither can any man or concern afford to sell you goods for LESS than COST and succeed.

Those who advertise goods at one half or one third of their value are still making profits big enough to pay for all the shams they do to their customers.

Ours is a Plain,

Fair dealing house. We sell our Merchandise at a living profit. Our goods are same price to everybody. Each article is marked in Plain Figures.

No Private Cost Mark that you can't Understand. Should you buy of us and not be pleased with your purchase, we refund your money as freely as we receive it. This has been the success of our house, as the news spread and before reaching Whitesboro a crowd had collected and took them from the wagon and hung them to a tree.—Ed died before they hung him but Will was game to the last. Sitting beside a mus- tange pony with a rope around his neck, the other around a limb, he was asked if he had anything to say and he said, "No, my son, I have not- I am fairly good for a while, I don't like the idea of dying, but I am not afraid of it.—Oh, You men all hate me and my brothers, but you have cause to go for me, I have you all walk a mile in my shoes and I had my hand in your cake some of you fellows—don't you all keep the company you want to keep? My Mother was a widow and her sons never agreed, I was the first of my spur into the horse's flank.—I swung off into eternity.—The two men secured the horses and the county was freed from the trouble of going off desperadoes that ever had tested the law in this wilderness and they all rode away in triumph and glory all the way.—

Dead Body of a Young Man Turned to Stone.

body was found at 1107 human body, and the result was a body which, as turned from flesh to white, marble, as hard and firm as the stone itself.

This is a very strange, and exceptional sight in the undertaking establishment of Mr. F. X. Billey, at 62 Pryor street.

It is a case which will be spoken of and treated written upon in future works of embalming.

The body is that of a young man, strong, formerly the chemist of the Atlanta Perfumery Company.

Forty-five days ago Mr. Soundstrong died, and his remains were taken to Mr. Billey's office to be embalmed.

The dead chemist's wife was in Sweden, his native home and she requested that his body be embalmed so that she could come across the ocean and look upon his dead face again.

The body was embalmed by Mr. Billey, himself. Some days ago he noticed that the flesh was crystallizing.

The fluids used in embalming are exceedingly poisonous, and as Mr. Soundstrong had died from mercurial poison, Mr. Billey believed that the action of one poison on the other was producing the strange result.

Gradually the face of the dead man became whiter and whiter, harder and harder, until now it is nothing but white stone, as white and firm as marble.

Mr. Billee is an undertaker and embalmer of long experience, but never in his life, he says, has he either heard of or seen such an instance as this one.

The bereaved wife of the dead chemist has reached Atlanta, after her long trip from Sweden, and has looked upon the stone face of her husband. Her grief was pitiful to see.

Next week the body will be taken back to Sweden, where it will rest under the sod of his native land.

MARY ANDERSON'S KITTEN.
It Acts Like Any Other Kitten,
But Gets More Credit.

Miss Mary Anderson, says a writer in the Courier-Journal, has a pet cat which exhibits remarkable evidences of the truth of metempsychosis. There are stranger things than are dreamed of in our philosophy, and many domestic animals seem to be endowed with all the attributes which manifest what we call "souls" or "immortality." Miss Mary's cat became a mother one night, and every chit and child died, leaving the mother inconsolable. She would throw herself on the floor, drag herself along by the forefeet, and moan and whine like a human being. Finally the actress, deeply impressed with such exhibitions of heartbrokenness, sent out and procured one little kitten, which she gave to the feline Rachel. Her joy was indescribable. The mother got into the box with her adopted child, fondling it and meowing for excess of joy. For two weeks she would not leave the box for fear she might lose her adopted kitten. Food was brought to her to keep her alive.

Meanwhile Miss Anderson was taken ill and moved to the second floor. After two or three days her pet went in search of her mistress, and, finding her, sprang upon the bed, caring less for her with as much fondness as if she had been a child. "I'm a little pet," said Miss Anderson, "and when you were sick and distressed I gave you a little kitten to console you." No sooner were the words spoken than down the stairs ran the old cat, and, seizing her foster-kitten by the back of the neck, bore it to her mistress, jumped on the bed, and tenderly placed it in her arms. The truth of this is vouched for by Who says that animals have not souls?

A child that is restless at night and don't sleep well, should be given Dr. Bull's Worm Destroyers. It may have worms.

For Congress

WILLIAM H. FORNEY,

Of Calhoun County.

The attendance at the State Normal school continues to grow with gratifying rapidity. There are now more pupils attending the school than at any former period and there are yet more to come.

The new industry secured for Jacksonville additional to the great steel plant will cost in its construction near $700,000. Advances from Boston report the company formed and the money paid in. There will be humulating times in Jacksonville this winter.

The party on the mountain camp out under army tents. Those who have visited the mountain top report them comfortably and even elegantly fixed up and that they live very high up there. Those of the party who occasionally descend to town give every evidence of improved health.

Work is being vigorously pushed on Park Avenue and soon it will be as attractive as Francis Avenue. It will be paved with the white self-cementing gravel found in the mountain here. The width of this Avenue has been increased from 60 to 80 feet by consent of property owners along the street. Mr. Wilkerson has contract for grading and McAdams is doing this street.

The Democracy of the Fifth Congressional District renominated Congressman Cobb over all competitors on the first ballot the 10th inst. Congressman Clark of the Mobile District has also been renominated. This leaves only Congressman Wheeler to be re-nominated, when Alabama Democrats will have put the seal of approval on all the present members of Congress. There is no doubt but what Wheeler will get the nomination.

We are in receipt of the Premium List of the First Annual Fair of the Oxford Lake Line, to be held at Oxford Lake, commencing Monday October 6th, and closing Saturday October 11th.

It is unusually large and liberal. The races will be very fine. The fair will undoubtedly be a great success. The whole of Calhoun county ought to take great interest in this fair. We hope Jacksonville will be fully represented. We shall have more to say of it before the fair opens.

Mr. Grant has been staying this week at Camp Arcadia with Messrs. Goodlett, Crow and others, trying to recall in such an experience some of the joys of camp life when the young men of this country were soldiering. Rumor brings to town account of the good time that stag party are having up on the mountain top eighteen hundred feet above the level of the sea; but we think, with all that, he could scarce resist, were he here, the winning invitation to return to Piedmont Springs which, we conclude from the chirography and expression, comes from one of the fair ladies whose presence this summer has lent attractiveness to that charming resort. THE REPUBLICAN presents her letter this week with pleasure and expresses the hope that she may favor it with yet other communications from her facile pen.

Mr. John Temple Graves formerly editor of the Rome Tribune has applied the Democratic yardstick to Mr. Everett, the Alliance candidate for Congress in the Seventh Georgia Congressional District, and Mr. Everett says he will abide the action of the Democratic caucus at Washington even if it decides against the sub-treasury bill. In other words that he will stand on the Democratic platform rather than the St. Louis resolutions. On receiving this information Mr. Graves resigned the editorship of the Tribune rather than antagonize Mr. Everett. In this Mr. Graves did exactly right. Being an Allianced man does not disqualify Mr. Everett for Democratic support as long as he stands by the Democratic party and abides the decision of its caucus.

We believe in Democrats everywhere standing by the regular nominees of the party, provided such nominees declare that they owe paramount allegiance to the Democratic party which has nominated them. In the Seventh Georgia Congressional District the Democratic yardstick has been applied to Mr. Everett, the Alliance candidate for Congress, who received the nomination of the regular Democratic Convention of the District, the 10th inst. Mr. Everett has declared that he is a better Democrat than Allianced man and that he will stand by the caucus action of the Democratic party and that if the party is against the sub-treasury bill he will not support it. He will stand by his party at all hazards.

In view of these declarations on his part, we do not see how Dr. Fulton's opposition to him can be justified by Democrats. The Democrats of the Seventh Georgia District ought to stand by their colors and support Mr. Everett.

ARCADIA.

A Glimpse of Batchelor's Ranch On the Mountain.

WHITE'S VIEW, Sept. 12, '90. From the comparatively luxurious appointments of Piedmont Springs hotel to an army tent and men cooking is quite a come down, or rather go up, for here we are from two to three hundred feet higher than at Piedmont Springs; but we are all enjoying ourselves, notwithstanding the fact that we do not take our food in regular served courses and miss the pleasure of woman's society, which latter was a particularly charming attraction at Piedmont Springs. But there is an exhilaration in the pure air and a tonic effect in the ice cold waters here that cannot be surpassed anywhere, and the view is very broad, and as fine as that from the top of Clinch Mountain in East Tennessee. Then, too, there is much in the freedom of this camp life, the rude appliances for comfort, the really better coffee than can be found anywhere outside of camp, that reminds one of the glorious days of 1861-65 when, released from the restraints of school and home, the gallant youth of the southland went laughingly and carelessly to hardship, danger and death. Men are but grown up boys and one never gets too old to enjoy a holiday, and here the gravest and most dignified men relax and give vent to natural and unrestrained enjoyment the most. A sojourn here acts, so to speak, as a removal of the cork, giving room for the natural effervescence of the spirits. I would not have wives and sweethearts to take fright at this picture of masculine freedom. It is of the most innocent nature, and old-fashioned, open, hearty laughter constitutes much of it, laughter following a bon mot or good story, which sends the blood coursing like a racer to every cell and extremity of one's being, spurring each organ to natural and healthy action and paving the way to good digestion. So far as the morals of the camp go, that is well looked after. We have had two preachers as guests part of the time and now we have a Sunday school superintendent with us all the time. Nor have we been deprived altogether of the refining presence of the ladies. About twice a week ladies belonging to the families of some one of us come to the camp bringing brightness and any amount of good cheer packed away in baskets. Tomorrow we are promised a visit from quite a delegation from among Jacksonville's fairest and best.

But for these visits we are in as much solitude as if in the depths of some primitive forest on the frontier. Not a sound of human life reaches us at these heights, except the chiming of the church bells, which salute us as they pass on up to heaven. Indeed I was much reminded of one of the numerous scenes in Fenimore Cooper's frontier stories when a few nights ago, Mr. Benedict stalked into the glare of our camp fire from the outward darkness so noiselessly that we did not know of his presence even until we had received his salute. It was as laconic too as that of any of Cooper's trappers. When questioned he said he came from the lofty and desolate peaks of Chimney Mountain, along the crest of the ridge, over almost insurmountable barriers, straight to the camp. We hastened to invite him to our repast and bade him welcome to our humble shelter, which he was fain to accept, seeing the darkness of the night and the roughness of the way to Jacksonville. He is an Ohioan who lately came into this country and pre-empted 160 acres of land on the mountains near here. He is a thorough woodsman and knows the land lines and general configuration of the country now as well as the oldest inhabitant. He says a road way can be got from Jacksonville to Nances Creek Valley with but little grade and a mile shorter than any other route. It ought to be built.

This camp will not break up until the chilly winds of October drive us to the lowland; but I want to make one more visit to Piedmont Springs, if any of the good company I knew there yet linger at that spot. Though an army were encamped there it would be desolate to me if those bright spirits I learned to love and esteem in too brief a month were gone.

At the hospitable home of Hon. Phil. Cooper, in Alexandria, last night, Mr. J. M. Ragan, the very affable young conductor on the Alabama Mineral road, was married to Miss Annie Cooper. LETTER FROM PIEDMONT SPRING.

Piedmont Springs, Ala., Sep. 9, 1890. "What's this dull town to me, Robin's not here."

This has the melancholy refrain re-echoed through the corridors of Piedmont Springs Hotel, since the departure, one week ago today, of him who made the assembly shine, or, in other words, our highly esteemed editorial friend, Mon.

However, we are not content to dispense with our accustomed corner in the columns of the "REPUBLICAN," and therefore, in default of a writer competent to fill the place of our original correspondent, we have determined to combine forces and endeavor to produce thus something similar to the composite article suggested by himself. Quite an untoward accident occurred at the ten-pin-alley this forenoon, which drove the ladies of our party to their rooms and interrupted for a time the assembling of themselves together. Intent upon a close contested game, we heeded not the premonitory symptoms of an approaching shower until it had broken upon us with sufficient violence to drive us underneath the flooring of the alley for protection. Here we cowered in cramped attitude for several minutes enjoying the novelty of the situation, and congratulating ourselves upon the happy expedient which had saved us a hasty retreat to the rather distant hotel. Alas! the instability of human plans! Our content was short lived, for instead of the brief shower we expected would soon pass away and permit us to continue our interrupted game, there came a genuine rainstorm, beating in the sides of our insufficient shelter in torrents, and flooding the trough-like floor above us with a surging river. Ugh! the horrid water, trickling through the great cracks of the floor, dripping in chilly cascades down our necks and faces, wetting collars, demolishing bangs, standing in glistening beads on the tips of noses and on the ends of "each particular hair!" One solid half-hour we groveled thus, our wet and clinging draperies crushed to earth and dabbled in the muddy pools about us. Then, finding our selves drenched beyond all hope of redemption, we determined to make a mad break for the hotel, acting upon the principle of the Irishman who declared that when caught out in a rain he always "stood under one tree until he got wet, then he went under another." When the writhing, squirming mass of humanity occupying our cramped quarters was finally untangled and the several limbs apporportioned to their several and rightful owners, the hand of the faithful scorer was found valiantly clutching the incomplete and almost obliterated score, whereon she herself the champion goose-egg maker of the party, had broken her record by making the second to the highest score of the game.

All the time that we crowded in misery in our wretched prison house, our bifurcated Ganymede, Joe, the setter-up of pins, in blissful and enviable indifference to the weather, and in the freedom from the possession of a character to sustain or clothing to care for, disported himself over our heads, rolling the heaviest balls with all the force and elish gleam of Heinrich Hudson and his unceasing men.

Again was there a dance in the dining room of the hotel last night, when all the surrounding country, lent her beauty and her chivalry to grace the occasion. Jacksonville was ably represented by Col. McKee, who with Mr. Cummins, of "The Piedmont Inquirer," though neither claimed to be a dancing-man, added much to the dignity of the evening by their presence.

Upon being interviewed the lady in question insists that there was a remark of Mr. Grant's made under the inspiring influence of the cold moon, which was as cloudy and as much in need of clearing up as could possibly be her own open and above board assertion.

In the recollection of a promise made on the eve of departure, a promise forgotten, apparently soon as made—the guests here are prepared with one accord to raise our voices in supplication and cry, along with Lord Ullin's daughter:—"Come back! Come back!" In mercy Grant our prayer!

LEWIS VS LEWIS.

BY ARTHUR LUCAS.

An elegantly dressed young woman left the law office of Judge Sharp just as Walter Lossing was about to enter it.
As she swept by him the young man caught a momentary glimpse of her face, which told him as plainly as words could have done that she was unhappy. He wondered what trouble could have come to one who was so evidently in want of nothing that money could provide.
Walter Lossing was what is commonly called, in euphemistic newspaper phraseology, "a rising young lawyer." In other words, he had recently been admitted to practice, was as poor as the law allowed—and, as well known, the law is very liberal in this respect—and had hard work to "rise" high enough to keep his head above water. This, too, in spite of the fact that his ability was above the average.
Just now, he had come to get the old judge's opinion on the knotty point that had come up in one of the few cases which he had succeeded in securing. Judge Sharp had taken a kindly interest in him, and had already given him valuable advice and otherwise befriended him on several occasions. In fact, it is highly probable that the knotty point that was puzzling him would have been solved at all if it hadn't been for the judge, who had thrown the case in which it occurred in his way.
Judge Sharp had just tied together a bundle of legal papers and thrust them into a pigeon hole when the young man came in.
"How are you, my boy? Sit down. What can I do for you today? I've just got the end to a case which ought to be a lesson to all young fellows," said the judge, all in one breath, as was his manner.
"What case was that, Judge?" asked Lossing as he dropped into a chair.
"The Lewis vs. Lewis action for a limited divorce on the ground of incompatibility, cruel treatment, and so forth. You saw the young woman who just went out?"
"That was the plaintiff. Nice sort of a girl, well educated, refined, handsome, and all that; but not the right sort of a wife for the man she married. You see she is the only daughter of wealthy people who had naturally gratified every whim that came into her head. She fell in love with a young man whose respectability was his chief recommendation."
"Well, wasn't that the principal thing to be considered?" exclaimed Lossing.
"Other things, being equal, yes; but in this case it was only one of the principal considerations, as you see. The young man was as poor as could be; he had only a modest salary to depend on, and nothing in the way of prospects. The girl's parents objected at first, but finally consented to the match. They probably knew that she would have her way in spite of all objections they might interpose. You hear and read a good deal about the tyranny of parents who refuse to sanction marriages which they believe will end in unhappiness; but I tell you, my boy, that what is called tyranny is in many cases hard, honest, common sense, and good judgment based on experience and observation."

"Well, they were married and for a short time were happy. Then the young wife began to be discontented. She missed the luxuries she had been accustomed to enjoy. The modest home her husband could provide for her was so different from the elegance with which she had formerly been surrounded, she began to fret. Her discontent soon found expression in words. Naturally her husband became angered at what he considered her lack of devotion, when she suggested that her parents would lend financial aid he became indignant and insisted that she should be content with her lot until by his own efforts he could better their condition. You can imagine that this state of affairs soon led to something worse. Quarrels, she began to frequent; love was a thing of the past. No doubt thinking herself much abused she left him and returned to her parents. Then application for a separation was made. All efforts to effect a reconciliation were fruitless. Well, this is the end. The law has sanctioned the separation; that, already existed in fact; the young woman remains with her parents; the young man will probably go to the devil for his unfortunate marriage has taken all ambition out of him."
"And the lesson?" suggested Lossing.
"Don't marry a woman who is beyond your station financially; don't take a wife from a mansion unless you have a mansion in readiness for her."
"But surely, all marriages of this kind don't result as this one has done."
"No, probably not; there are exceptions to every rule. I am speaking of the rule. You will find as you grow older that it holds good in nine cases out of ten. Marriage is too serious a matter to enter into lightly; and happiness too valuable to stake it on a chance. Heirs are content with love in a cottage only in novels; in real life you seldom find love that is strong enough to conquer all the weaknesses of human nature; especially of female human nature."
Lossing sat in silence for a minute or more. The old man's words seemed to have impressed him deeply.
At length he asked the question he had come to propound, received a reply that made the matter clear to him, thanked his adviser, and was about to leave when the judge remarked:
"By the way, my boy, if you want any further points on that case come to my house this evening, and I will show you what authorities to consult."
"Thank you, I shall do so," replied Lossing. He took the kind of offer rather as a matter of course, for Judge Sharp had long ago told him to make use of his library whenever he wished, and he had frequently availed himself of the permission.
Lossing, after leaving the judge's office, went directly to his own, which was in another part of the building. Instead of busying himself with the papers that lay strewn about on the desk, he paced to and fro excitedly for several minutes. Then he sat down and for at least half an hour stared very hard at nothing, or perhaps at the wall. Could he have seen his own face just then he would have been surprised at the change that had come over it. There was a hopeless, despairing expression there which would have seemed quite inexplicable to any of those who knew him best.
"There's no other way; I'll have to do it," he suddenly exclaimed, at the same time rising abruptly. Then he put on his hat and coat, went out, and walked rapidly away.
The evening of that day found him at the house of Judge Sharp, sitting in the library, apparently engrossed in a legal volume. But as he had been staring at the same page for the last ten minutes, and that page happened to contain only a portion of the index, it is doubtful that he was as deeply engrossed as he seemed to be.
A light step fell upon the carpeted floor behind him. A young girl had entered the room. A very pretty young girl she was, and the glad smile that lighted up her face when she saw the young man made her all the prettier. Walter Lossing had evidently not confined his attention to Judge Sharp's library on his previous visit. If he had the judge's daughter would not have been so pleased to see him.
"Pouring over dry legal volumes as usual, I see. What perplexing case rests heavily on your mind now, Walter? Why, what ails you? You look as glum as if you had lost every friend in the world."
Lossing had turned and risen as the young girl spoke, and the light, streaming upon his face, showed it to be a mirror of everything gloomy and disheartening.
"It isn't a law case that is troubling me; I would it were only that," he replied with a sigh that was almost a groan.

"What is it then? Has any misfortune befallen you?"
"Yes, a misfortune indeed; or at least it seems to be now. Doubtless it is all for the best."
"What are you talking about? Why don't you tell me what is troubling you?"
"I came for that purpose; that I might tell you. After this evening we must not meet again."
"Not—again?" Nellie Sharp repeated the words slowly, as if she could not grasp their full meaning. The color surged to her cheeks and then receded, leaving her very pale.
"What do you mean, Walter? What has happened? You can not be in earnest."
"But I am in earnest; I have brought myself to this after the hardest mental struggle man could possibly undergo. I must be in earnest about this; it is my duty; I would be dishonorable if I did otherwise. But I am talking wildly; at random; I hardly know what I am saying or what to say; or how to say it. I heard some advice today; it came from your father; I am in honor bound to follow it. This is what he told me."
Walter rather incoherently recounted what Judge Sharp had told him of the case of Lewis vs. Lewis, and the comments he had made on that case.
"And is that all?" asked Nellie when he had finished. She smiled a little as she asked the question, and a close observer would have noticed that a slight tremor passed her lips.
"All? Is it not too much? Knowing that your father holds this view, can I do otherwise than give you up?"
"I thought you had more pluck," said the young girl, with just a suggestion of scorn in her voice.
"It is not a matter of courage, but of conscience, of honor. Can I go to the man who gives me such advice as I have received, who tells me never to marry a woman who is beyond my station financially, and ask him to give to me his daughter, who is dearer to him than all else? I am poor; I have none but the most prosaic prospects; while you, well I need not say more, you can readily see my position."
"But I can't see it in the light in which you place it. I thought you had sufficient faith in me not to believe that I would do as that dreadful woman did of whom my father told you. Your prospects are certainly better than you represent them. Furthermore, my father would yield to my wishes."
"I do not lack faith in you; heaven knows how strong that faith is; it is because I would feel that I had acted treacherously toward one who has been my best friend if I held you to your promise, that which will take all happiness out of my life."
"Probably it never occurred to you that the happiness of any one else might suffer; it seems that I am not considered all."
"You will soon forget; you will soon be happier than I could ever make you."
"Oh! certainly, we women forget so easily; it is only the men that remember; only the hearts of men that are broken. However, since you wish it so, it is not for me to object."
"It is not what I wish; it is what I must do."
"But suppose I should refuse to accept your decision; suppose I was to assert my rights? Suppose I was to insist at least on your trying for a term of years to bring your financial condition up to what you consider the proper standard?"
"It would be a promise to keep you bound by a promise to one who would have to struggle perhaps for years and might fail at last."
"I see it is vain to reason with one that is unreasonable; it shall be as you wish."
Just then Judge Sharp entered the room, and the painful meeting was abruptly ended.
A few moments later Judge Sharp's clerk came into Walter Lossing's office one day and told him that the judge wanted to see him.
It seemed to Walter that the judge looked unusually stern when he responded to the latter's summons a few minutes later. "Come in here," he wanted to talk to you," said the judge as he motioned to Walter to follow him into his private office.
"Sit down. I will come to the point at once. I am instructed by a client of mine to bring suit against you. We have the clearest kind of a case and should certainly win in the courts; but we desire to give you an opportunity to compromise the matter. You may wish to escape the publicity."
"A suit? Why, who could want to sue me? I owe nothing; there is no cause, no ground—you must be joking."
"Never was more serious. There is a cause, and a good one, as you will learn presently. My client's case is flawless; she—"
She! Ah! I see, some blackmailing scheme, some advent—
"There, there, don't get excited; it's nothing of the kind. The plaintiff in this case is eminently respectable, as you yourself will admit."

"Who is she? What is the cause of action? Why don't you tell me at once instead of beating about the bush?"
"The cause of action is breach of promise," said the old judge impressively.
"Breach of promise? Why, I never—"
"Perhaps you can guess the plaintiff's name now," suggested the judge.
"You see," continued he, as Walter still sat like one stricken dumb, "the young lady thinks that you have been influenced by something that was said to you in a general way by one who intended to make no specific application of his remarks; she believes that if the matter is presented to you in the proper light no extreme measures will be necessary to make you see that you were altogether wrong in arriving at a certain decision based on the case of Lewis vs. Lewis."
Walter grasped the judge's hand, he said nothing; he couldn't have said anything just then, for there was a great lump in his throat.
"I need a partner," resumed the judge; "I have more work than I can manage alone; I think you are just the kind of a man I want; and then, you know, being partners, we can easily compromise this matter which I have mentioned. You will have no objections to such an arrangement, I suppose?"
"Do You Want to Escape?"
Do you want to escape chills and fever this season? No matter how much malarial in the atmosphere and how many may be taken down in your neighborhood with malarial fevers, they could have escaped and you can escape by a use of that excellent remedy, Smith's Tonic Syrup, made by Dr. John Bull, of Louisville, Ky. It cures chills and fever when quinine fails. It is far better than quinine, for it leaves no unpleasant after effects. Smith's Tonic Syrup is not an experiment. For many years it has been considered the only safe and certain cure for chills and fever. You do yourself great injustice if you fail to take this remedy, for it will cure you even when all other treatment fails.

THE COOSA RIVER.

The Biggest Appropriation Yet Made For Opening That Stream.
A special from Rome, Ga., to the Atlanta Constitution has the following on the subject of the Coosa river improvement:
Three hundred thousand dollars was the size of the appropriation bill passed by the house and senate for the opening up of the Coosa river, so Engineer Wingfield of the United States engineer corps of the northern division of the Coosa river informed your reporter.
The signature of President Harrison is all that is now needed. It is the largest appropriation the Coosa river has ever had, by at least four times, and the United States engineers are going to work right away to open up the Coosa river, so that Rome can have direct water transportation to the gulf.
Capt. Philip M. Price is the government superintendent of the work, and resides in Montgomery, Ala. For years the work of clearing the shoals has been retarded on account of lack of funds. Three locks have been completed just below Greensport, but there are many more to be put in. Engineers Julian, Wingfield, and Singleton are in Rome today, and are surveying the Horseleg shoals, one mile below Rome. Engineer Wingfield says that the first work that will be to deepen the channel of Horseleg shoals from 3 to 4 feet. That work began on the preliminary survey to-day. Thus a large force of hands will be put to work.

A NEGRO PLEADS FOR WHITE SUPREMACY.

Teaching Speech to the Mississippi Constitutional Convention.
The Negro Recognizes and Believes That the "White Race is Superior And Must Rule—Montgomery's Speech Lays Over Anything Ever Uttered by Blanche K. Bruce or John R. Lynch—He Supports the Committee Report Which Disfranchises Over One Hundred and Eleven Thousand Negroes.
JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 15.—Montgomery, the negro delegate, addressed the Convention today in support of the committee report, and proved himself by far the ablest man of his race, who has achieved prominence in the State for years, being easily the equal of John R. Lynch and Blanche K. Bruce. He said in part: "Before the trust of becoming a member of this honorable body was conferred upon me by my constituents, I fully stated to them my earnest conviction, that the work of this convention, in order to be successful must restrict the franchise by prescribing such qualification for voters as would reduce the negro vote of this State. I entertained the same opinion then that I hold now, that the Federal Congress will interpose no objections provided such restrictions are honestly imposed: for the purpose of bringing about a fair solution of the great problem now confronting the people of this State."
The speaker went on to say how much of the wealth and property of the South was due to the labor of the colored men. He referred to the loyalty of the negro race to the Southern people throughout the war and concluded that branch of his subject by saying: "It is the best justice to my race that I should recall these affecting memories upon this floor today. My mission here, is to bridge the chasm that has been widening and deepening for generations; to divert the maelstrom that threatens destruction to you and yours, while it promises no enduring prosperity to me and mine. The fortunes of war tore asunder our relations as they had existed in a greater or less degree for two centuries. The master and slave of yesterday met today upon a plane of equality; possessed of the same rights and privileges under the common law of the land. Your proud nature rebelled and you turned from the scene in disgust. At this juncture an alien appeared and claimed the confidence which the people of our condition, at that time, must need to place in some superior guiding hand. The alien sought and obtained our confidence, but not our affection. That Mr. President, will remain with you and yours till the memories and traditions of former generations become obliterated."
"All are well aware that our race has not yet obtained the high plane of moral, intellectual, and political excellence, common to yours, but it is our privilege to press onward and upward. It is a lack of confidence in any adjustment of our political economy opposed by you that keeps up the race solidly. Without the restoration of confidence I can see no solution of this great problem."
The speaker then declared his belief that the report of the Franchise Committee is the safest measure for the convention to adopt. A wall comes up from thousands of hearts in mute appeal to the convention. This bill will restrict 124,234 negro voters, 118,899 white, giving a net white majority of 49,451. Such, I believe to be the virtual effect of the measures reported by the committee. Mr. President it is a fearful sacrifice laid upon the altar of liberty. Many of these men you seek to disfranchise I know personally. Their hearts are as true as steel. Many are soldiers who have stood amidst the smoke of battle on bloody fields in defence of the flag which every American proudly hails as the ensign of freedom and his talisman of protection in all civilized lands. I wish to say to my people, we have not taken away your high privilege, but only lifted it to a higher plane, and exalted the station of the great American birthright. It is due to us, he continued, that there should be some expression on the part of this great body, indicating that the practice is correct, that the race problem shall become a thing of the past and not to vex and alarm the public, that the two great races shall travel side by side, each mutually assisting the other to mount higher and higher in the scale of human progress."
"Papa," said mamma, "bring home a box of Bull's Worm Destroyer." She meant Dr. Bull's Worm Destroyer, but then the children call it candy and papa knew what she wanted.

Racy Dispute Over Right-of-Way by Two Rival Railroad Companies.
GADSDEN, Ala., Sept. 15.—Much excitement was caused in Attalla today and some very hot words passed over the seizure of the right-of-way by the Gadsden and Attalla Union Belt railroad, and the re-taking by the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad. Attorneys for both roads were on the field giving instructions and engineers at the head of their respective forces were struggling for possession of the right-of-way over a strip of land. Many words were passed and repassed until blood was hot and pistols were drawn and but for the bravery and courage of Deputy Sheriff Wimpee in rushing into the midst of the fight and seizing the pistols and placing under arrest the principal participants some one or more lives would have been lost.
The Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis squad succeeded in tearing away the Gadsden and Attalla Union railway tracks and placing their tracks down at the point of rifles and pistols, threatening to shoot any man that interfered. After the cooling of hot blood a consultation of lawyers and principal participants was had and a satisfactory settlement was made. The Gadsden and Attalla Union Belt Railroad secured the right-of-way by paying for the same and keeping in repair the crossing. All is quiet again.

His Paper Was Read by Someone.

Years ago, when Henry Grady was struggling to bring the Rome Commercial into front ranks, says the Rome (Ga.) Tribune, he called one day and asked the Rounsaville Brothers for an advertisement. J. W. Rounsaville replied: "Why, Grady, nobody reads your paper; it is no use to advertise in it." A happy thought suggested itself to Mr. Grady. He went to his office and wrote the following advertisement, which appeared next morning in the Commercial: "Wanted, fifty cats. Liberal price for the same. Apply to the Rounsaville Brothers." Well, the picture that presented itself at Rounsaville's corner next morning beggars description. "Boys of all ages, and sizes—boys of all tints from the fair-haired youth to the sable Ethiopian—barefoot boys and ragged boys, red-headed boys, freckled-faced boys—town boys and country boys—boys from all parts of Floyd county blocked up the sidewalk door-ways and street with bags full of cats—cats of every description, name and other—house cats, yard cats, barn cats, church cats, fat cats and lean cats, honest cats and thiefish cats." Well, to make a long story short, the Rounsavilles told Mr. Grady to reserve a column for their advertisement as long as his paper continued, and that was just what Grady wanted.
Arsenic and Polash Three Times a Day for Twenty-Five Years.
I have been taking S. S. S. (Swift's Specific) and feel it to be my duty to state its results; that others who are similarly affected may profit by my experience, and be relieved of their sufferings. I had suffered for a long, long time with what the doctors called Herpes, an eruption of the skin, forming scales and blotches which was horrible to endure. Under the advice of physicians I took 30 drops of Fowler's Solution of Arsenic every day for 25 years—besides many other kind of medicines; without a cure. I have been taking S. S. S. for about two months, and the eruption and unpleasant symptoms have all disappeared, and I am continuing it to completely root it out of my blood, which I am confident it will do; and what it has done for me I am sure it will do for others, for there are thousands of such cases all over the country which resist all other treatment. I have lived here in my present business for 22 years.

Small Farms.
Forty-five years ago Henry Ward Beecher was preaching in Indiana and editing an agricultural journal which was a good one. Here is what he said: "then in relation to small farms:
"We believe in small farms and thorough cultivation." We believe that soil loves to be tilled as well as its owner, and ought; therefore to be manured. "We believe in large crops that leave the land better than they found it—making both the farm and the farmer rich at once. We believe in going to the bottom of things, and therefore, in deep plowing, and enough of it; all the better if with a subsoil plow." We believe that every farm should own a good farmer. "We believe that the best fertilizer of any soil is a spirit of industry, enterprise and intelligence—without this, lime and gypsum, bones and green manure, marl and guano will be of little use. We believe in good fences, good barns, good farmhouse, good stock, good orchards, and children enough to gather the fruit."
An incident happened in the New York Tribune building the other evening which may be an effectual warning against drinking water from open faucets, or from any vessel in the dark. Mrs. Finn, one of the women who clean the offices, was drawing water from a faucet at a sink on the seventh floor, when she was startled by the sudden appearance of an extremely lively snake nearly two feet long. Mrs. Finn wasn't looking for snakes or thinking about them just then, and when this one emerged from the faucet she dropped her mop and pail, and fled screaming through the corridors down the stairs. The janitor finally caught her and obtained a somewhat incoherent explanation. "Seeing a stout stick, the janitor hurried up to the seventh floor, where he found the snake crawling in lively fashion over the tiled floor. The janitor was not frightened and he soon crushed the reptile's head." It was a common water snake, not poisonous, but a decidedly unpleasant thing to come across in water used for drinking purposes.

For Congress

WILLIAM H. FORNEY,

Of Calhoun County.

Don't forget the Oxford Lake Line Fair. This Congressional District ought to make it a great success. Its energetic management are pushing things for all they are worth. Send in your exhibits and take your family there when the time comes.

The expert representing a big cotton mill syndicate was in Jacksonville this week examining this place with a view to the location of a fifty thousand spindle cotton mill. He expressed himself as pleased with the outlook. This enterprise is designed to utilize the waste labor of the population the steel plant will furnish.

The State Fair and Alabama Exposition which opens at Birmingham October 20th and lasts to Nov. 1st has so far outgrown the expectations of the management that new buildings have been found necessary to accommodate the exhibits. It will be the grandest exposition ever held in the State. Calhoun county ought to be generally represented. Send for premium lists. They can be had at the Probate office of this county or from R. P. Dexter, Secretary, Birmingham, Ala.

The Congressional fight in the Seventh Georgia District is hot and getting hotter every day. Already the "records" of parties are being brought in by the newspapers. Dr. Felton is pressing it home on Mr. Everett that he forced Congressman Clements out because he, Clements, would not agree to support the sub-treasury bill and then that he, Everett, after getting the nomination, went back on the bill himself. This is losing Everett some Alliance votes.

Chattanooga made her first run of steel by the basic process the 16th inst. This process will utilize the phosphoric ores of the South. The manufacture of steel at Chattanooga from ordinary Southern ores marks a new and brilliant era in Southern development. Jacksonville will follow soon in steel making on a similar scale by a process similar to the basic process. The two Chattanooga furnaces have a capacity of fifty tons a day. The three Jacksonville furnaces will have a capacity of three hundred tons a day. The drawing of the great plant is already in the office of the Jacksonville Mining and Manufacturing Company.

A dispatch from Anniston to the Montgomery Advertiser, says that the black wing of the Republican party of this Congressional District has nominated Jack Logan to run against Gen. Forney for Congress. If Jack don't make a better run for Congress than he did for the Legislature it will be a mighty long time before he will see Washington. Still this need not prevent certain parties from putting out the report that Jack is in the field at the instigation of certain politicians of Jacksonville. They said this when he got into his head to run against Mr. Cooper, and some few people in the county were fools enough to believe it.

We very much hope that the report is true in regard to the success of the National Farmers' Alliance in securing a loan of European capital to the extent of $32 a bale on two million bales of cotton, at 4 per cent. interest. This will enable the farmers to hold back for good prices and will inevitably force the price up. This is legitimate business and beats the sub-treasury bill, with its governmental interference in private business, all hollow. The money is cheap enough too at 4 per cent. We do not share the fears of those who affect to believe that this arrangement will enable a European syndicate to make a corner on cotton. Give the farmers money at 4 per cent. and they will not have to call upon the government or any other source for help. They will be at once the most prosperous and independent people in the world. They have been paying about 25 per cent. for credit.

Dr. B. S. Evans, of White Plains, whose kind disposition leads him always to the assistance of the deserving poor, came over some days ago and called the attention of the County Commissioners to the case of a most remarkable family living near White Plains. Commissioner Coker went with him to visit the family and to him we are indebted for the following facts in regard to the Sadler family. He found a family of five sisters and one brother, none of whom had ever married, whose combined ages reached the remarkable figure of 482 years. Blufford Sadder, the brother, is 86 years old and is almost totally blind. Elizabeth is aged 83, Francis 81, Mary Ann 80, Sally 78 and Jane, the youngest, 74. Sally is an idiot and Jane has been perfectly helpless for 9 years. The family have lived at their present home over thirty years and have all that while borne a perfectly spotless reputation. Notwithstanding their age and infirmity they are cheerful and perfectly resigned to their situation.

Here is a good field for the employment of practical charity. The ministers of the various churches throughout the county might give their congregation a chance to contribute to the support of these old people. The sums thus collected could be sent to Dr. Evans, who would see it properly applied to their relief.

The attention of our readers is invited to the advertisement of the North Georgia and Alabama Exposition at Rome, Georgia, this fall. The people of this section have always taken an interest in the Exposition at Rome and we presume, this year will prove no exception in this regard. The Romans know how to make their fair a success.

The large sum of thirteen millions seven hundred and sixty-two thousand four hundred and fifty dollars were paid to Southern farmers alone for cotton seed by the oil mills last year, which is just that much more than they would have received for their products, had it not been for the oil industry. The Conger bill destroys all this demand and takes this large amount of money out of the Southern farmers' pockets, yet Macune is favoring its passage. Montgomery Advertiser.

PLANS PERFECTED.

Farmers Will Be Enabled to Hold Part of the Crop.

FOREIGN MONEY FURNISHED.

Arrangements Completed Through the Cotton Committee of the National Farmers' Alliance.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—While the newspapers and politicians have been engaged in the discussion of the constitutionality of or unconstitutional of the sub-treasury scheme, the national Farmers' Alliance, the organization of the agricultural classes, has been diligently at work to perfect a plan by which they conceive to be immediate relief will be afforded to the cotton producers of this country.

The efforts of the committee of the National Farmers' Alliance having this matter in charge have been successful, and a meeting will be held in New York Monday for formally and finally concluding the negotiations and entering into the contract.

At the last meeting of the National Farmers' Alliance, the matter of arranging some plan by which the cotton producers could hold their crop for better prices, was referred to the cotton committee with power to make any arrangement possible to effect this end.

The committee at once opened negotiations with European capitalists, which have now been in progress several months, and it is given out in New York today that the arrangements have been at last perfected.

A prominent Alliance man from the south, who is in the city today to confer with representatives of foreign capitalists on the subject and who is on the inside, said to the Journal correspondent this morning:

"The National Alliance has achieved a great work. The cotton committee of the national body has completed arrangements with European capitalists, to advance $32 per bale on 2,000,000 bales of American cotton, to be stored in the warehouses of the south for a period of one year, allowing the farmer to dispose of the cotton any time during the year, should the price advance to his satisfaction.

"The European syndicate which advances this money on the cotton will charge four per cent. per annum interest and will be fully secured by the cotton on which the advance is made. This arrangement means that the farmers will have the use of $64,000,000 and at the same time keep 2,000,000 bales of cotton out of the market. This money comes at the very lowest rate of interest that could be asked, and the arrangement cannot fail to produce a marked advance in the price of cotton, as it virtually withdraws at once over one-fourth of the crop of the country.

"A year ago the cotton committee tried to make this arrangement with New York capitalists and negotiations were almost completed to secure a like advance on 1,000,000 bales, but some little hitch occurred which upset the negotiations. This year the committee sought Europe for capital and everything is at last arranged and the members of the cotton committee are now hurrying to New York to meet a representative of the European syndicate in this city next Monday, when final action will be taken."

MENACED WITH RUIN.

Cotton Oil Men Are Alarmed.

Memphis, Sept. 16.—The compound Lard bill now pending before the United States Senate will practically wipe the cotton seed and cotton seed oil industry of the South out of existence. At the present time the bill has wrought almost irreparable injury, and if it becomes a law the worst may be looked for. The Conger bill places the manufacture and sale of compound lard under the espionage of the Revenue Department and imposes a tax upon the product. Cotton seed oil enters largely into the manufacture of compound lard, and the tax imposed will in reality be a tax of 5 cents on every gallon of oil. This puts compound lard under a ban of suspicion, and it goes to the public as a branded article, subject to all that that implies. This action has virtually deprived the cotton seed oil men of the lard trade and has cut off three-fourths of the consumption of oil. They are accordingly driven to the export and soap markets to dispose of their product, and in these markets the oil is only taken in competition with other greases. In the Memphis merchants' Exchange today cotton seed was quoted at from $4 to $7 per ton. Before the bill passed the House prices ranged from $4 to $9 per ton higher. On the present basis the planters in the Memphis cotton district alone, will receive $100,000 less for this year's product than they did for that of last year, with the prospect of a much heavier loss if the Lard Bill becomes a law. Today there is actually no market for cotton seed oil. There are about 150,000 barrels in store from last year's crop, sufficient for the world's consumption for several days, and there it will have to stay until it is sold for grease or soap. Other market shows itself. This deprives the planter of a remunerative market for his product. Last year the Memphis mills, in which are invested $2,000,000, crushed 80,000 tons of seed and lost $3 on every ton, the planters receiving an average of $13.50. The present seed crop will be about 12,000 tons, and at the figures quoted the planter is out of pocket, just about $400,000.

The irony of fate is plainly shown in the effect of this bill on the negro-republican cotton planter. The cotton seed crop is the cash product of the negro planter. His cotton is mortgaged long before it is gathered, and upon being taken to market the mortgagee gets the proceeds. The seed is usually free, and on that he supports his family while harvesting his crop, and practically this is the only means of support he has. Cotton seed is particularly the "negro crop." The negroes have advanced to the practical ruin that stares them in the face, and when the reduced prices quoted on "change were made known today a consultation of prominent colored Republicans was held. It was to try and enlist the sympathies and services of Senator Blair and a number of other Senators to endeavor to head off the measure in the Senate. Telegrams were sent to Washington this evening and more will be dispatched in the morning calling for protection of the colored brother in this matter. The danger of practical ruin that is staring the cotton seed oil men in the face has united the American Cotton Oil Trust and the oil men who were on the outside and forces have been joined to fight the bill. The export trade, the only remaining hope, has a bad outlook this year, for the olive crop is plentiful and that means even lower prices for the local product.

The Bridal Tour.

No attraction at any Fair or Exposition has riveted the public attention to such an extent as the Balloon Bridal, which will come off at the State Fair in Birmingham. The prize offered is $250 and there are already four applications from different States. A large Gas Balloon with car and rigging all complete, and aerial passengers will be the bridal pair, an experienced aeronaut and the irrepressible newspaper correspondent. Fully 25,000 people, if not more will witness this exciting and novel spectacle.

MISSING THE ROD.
Oh, heart of mine, we shouldn't Worry so!
What we've missed of calm we couldn't
Have, you know!
What we've met of stormy pain,
And of sorrow's driving rain,
We can't meet again
If it blow.
We have erred in that dark hour
We have known,
When our tears fell with the shot
All alone.
Were not shine and shadow blend
As the gracious Master meant?
Let us temper our content
With His own.
For, we know, not every morrow
Can be sad;
So, forgetting all the sorrow
We have had,
Let us fold away our fears
And put by our foolish tears,
And through all the coming years
Just be glad.

Bright's Disease.
This insidious ailment, if too long neglected, will undermine the strongest constitution and bring the victim to a premature grave. Heed the timely warning, and regain health at once by a use of the power restorative, that most strengthening of the urinary and digestive organs, B. B. B.

David Runkel, Culman, Ga., writes
"I used a hundred dollars worth of medicine for Bright's disease, but it did me no good. I then took B. B. B., which relieved me. My appetite is restored and I urinate without pain."
J. A. Maddox, Atlanta, Ga., writes:
"I had great trouble in passing urine which was filled with sediments.
My back and loins gave me much pain and I lost my appetite, strength and flesh. I became nervous and unable to sleep soundly. Two bottles of B. B. B. gave me entire relief."
Thomas Williams, Sodus, Tenn.,
writes: "I was troubled with severe kidney complaint and confined to my bed. Six bottles of B. B. B. made a well man of me."
A DESPERATE DUEL.
Two Young Men Fight it Out to the Death.
Greensboro, Ala., Sept. 16.—A terrible and doubly fatal street duel took place between two prominent young men at Newbern, Ala., nine miles below here on Sunday evening at 4 o'clock.
Robert Turpin and Glen Duskin, the correspondent is informed, had a fuss Saturday evening, at which Duskin drew a pistol on Turpin, who, being unarmed, told him to wait until they met again and they would then shoot it out. This agreement was satisfactory.
The next evening they met and firing at once began.
Turpin emptied his revolver, four or five shots taking effect in Duskin's body. There is no hope of Duskin's recovery.
Duskin fired five times at Turpin.
Only one shot struck Turpin; the last hitting him in the forehead, killing him almost instantly.
The affair is greatly regretted.

What Kind of Advertising Pays?
So many houses are now claiming in large type, each to sell goods from 20 to 50 per cent. cheaper than any other house, that we believe sensible people disgusted with these improbable yarns, are paying but little attention to display ads. For that reason we have taken but little space in the papers but have adopted the plan of advertising our own counters by offering every week some new things at less than real value, and by keeping every department fresh all the time with novelties. It seems to work well. Our trade is growing very fast.
This week we shall offer many styles of
WASH DRESS GOODS, including Thin Black Goods, White Goods, Printed Mulls, Batiste, hams. They are all marked in plain figures.

A Good Name.
A Good Name is Certainly Better than Riches in the business world. That is why we never permit customers to leave our store dissatisfied with their purchases.
We aim to get the Good Will of the People, and our largely increasing business shows that we have been successful. Our goods, our prices, and our straight American methods of doing business make it an object for you to
TRADE WITH US.
It's a Unique position we occupy as Leaders. This is forcibly indicated by the scores who interview us daily on styles. As we are asked, our judgment must be valued. If we know—as we do—isn't it most natural we should pattern our stock accordingly? Certainly.
The Dealers who do so much talking about the amount of money they save to the purchasers clothing are the very ones who are making it more expensive. For instance, you cannot get a whole page advertisement for nothing. Neither can any man or concern afford to sell you goods for LESS than COST and succeed.
Those who advertise goods at one half or one third of their value are still making profits big enough to pay for all the charity they do to their customers.
Ours is a Plain,
Fair dealing house. We sell our Merchandise at a living profit. Our goods are same price to everybody. Each article is marked in Plain Figures.
No Private Cost Mark that you can't Understand.
Should you buy of us and not be pleased with your purchase, we refund your money as freely as we receive it. This has been the success of our house, as
We have never refused to give back purchase money, if the article is brought back unjured. Bear this in mind. In this advertisement we have stated how we do business; in our next we will tell you something else.
